Independence Day celebrated with jazz concert at UN

Pakistan marked its Independence Day at the United Nations (UN) on Monday with a performance by the Lahore-based Sachal Jazz Ensemble in the General Assembly hall.

The iconic hall resounded with slogans of "Pakistan Zindabad" and "Jeeway, Jeeway Pakistan" as Pakistan's Ambassador Maleeha Lodhi welcomed guests to the concert.

The hour-and-a-half-long performance was titled 'Music Beyond Borders' and was aimed at spreading the message of international peace and harmony. UN Deputy Secretary-General Amina J. Mohammed, who was present as chief guest, praised Pakistan's contribution to the UN.

"We commend Pakistan's remarkable dedication to the United Nations peacekeeping with more than 7,000 Pakistanis serving as blue helmets today and more than 170,000 who have served over the decades," she said.

Talking about Nigeria, Ms Mohammed said that she was raised in the same place that later saw the rise of the Boko Haram militant group. "I know what it's like to see your home maligned and misunderstood because it was hijacked by those who sought to give us a face that is not ours but that of extremists... lost souls," she added.

Led by master flutist Baqir Abbas, the performance of the ensemble mesmerised the audience with its popular tracks, including its founder Izzat Majeed's Shalamar, Dave Brubeck's Classic Take Five, Lahore Jazz and Tere Ishaq Nachaya.

The evening was rounded off by the highly popular track Shahbaz Qalandar that brought the audience to their feet.

The concert, organised by the Pakistan Mission to the UN, was oversubscribed and attracted people from all walks of life and across all nationalities. It was largely-attended by diplomats, UN officials, members of civil society organisations and institutions of performing arts, international media and Pakistani diaspora.

Najam Sethi for taking constructive measures for making it possible that foreign teams agree to visit Pakistan. The former batting icon said due to PCB's persistent efforts Sri Lankan and West Indies have also agreed to visit Pakistan in coming months which will be making Pakistan cricket 'memorable' as watching three foreign teams playing quality cricket will have a greater impact on our national cricket.

Pakistan qualify for 2018 men's Hockey World Cup

Pakistan men's hockey team have become the latest team to qualify for the Odisha Hockey Men's World Cup Bhubaneswar 2018.

The Greenshirts, currently ranked 14th in the FIH Hero World Rankings, finished in seventh position in the Hero Hockey World League Semi-Final in London, meaning they faced an anxious wait to see if that was good enough to earn them qualification to the blue riband event that will take place in India next year from November 28 to December 16, said an official statement.

The results at the Rabobank EuroHockey Championships, which are currently taking place in Amsterdam, Netherlands have gone very much in favour of Pakistan, with all four of the semi-finalists having already qualified for the World Cup via the Hockey World League route.

Under FIH regulations, the team that wins its continental qualifier automatically qualifies for the World Cup.

However, the semi-finals of the European continental qualifier will be contested by Germany, England, Netherlands and Belgium, teams that have already achieved World Cup qualification thanks to top five finishes in the Hockey World League Semi-Finals.

Former players lambast Greenshirts

This means that the World Cup ticket goes to the highest placed finisher from the Hockey World League Semi-Finals that has not already achieved World Cup qualification.

Pakistan are the higher ranked of the two seventh place finishers from the Hockey World League Semi-Final events that took place in London and Johannesburg, with 16th ranked France next in line for that all-important World Cup ticket.

Pakistan become the 13th team to qualify for next year's global showpiece, joining host nation

India, Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Canada, England, Germany, Ireland, Malaysia, Netherlands, Spain and New Zealand.

The final three men's World Cup qualification places will be decided by the outcomes of the upcoming Continental Championship events in Oceania (Oct 9-15), Asia (Oct 17-22), and Africa (Oct 19-29).

Chief Minister Syed Murad Ali Shah will perform groundbreaking of the Karachi Circular Railway (KCR) on the birthday of Quaid-i-Azam Mohammad Ali Jinnah (Dec 25) at a ceremony to be held at Wazir Mansion the residence of the founder of the nation.

The initial estimated cost of the project, which has been included in the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), is about $2 billion.

The chief minister formed a task force under the Karachi commissioner for removal of encroachments from the project area, where 67 acres have been encroached upon. He directed planning and development chairman Mohammad Waseem to expedite the paper work and ensure that international tenders for the project were invited in October.

The chief minister issued the directives while presiding over a meeting on the KCR at the CM House. The meeting was attended by Minister for Transport and Information Syed Nasir Shah, Mohammad Waseem, CM's principal secretary Sohail Rajput, transport secretary Saeed Awan, energy secretary Agha Wasif and others. Top officials of Chinese firms were also present. Initial estimated cost of the project is about $2 billion

CM Shah asked the transport department to float international tenders for KCR so that work on it could start on Dec 25. "It is the most important project which has been included in the CPEC after our constant efforts. I want to perform groundbreaking of the project on the birthday of the Quaid-i-Azam and, therefore, plan should be made accordingly," he said.

The transport minister informed the meeting that the KCR project had been approved by the Capital Development Working Party in May this year and it would now be placed before the Executive Committee of the National Economic Council for approval.

At this, the chief minister directed the planning and development chairman to make necessary paper work in this regard.

Nasir Shah said there were some encroachments on the KCR right of way (RoW), adding that some factories located between Wazir Mansion and Manghopir were releasing effluent there, while cattle pens and dense bushes also emerged along the RoW. "This causes serious problems in survey work which is in progress," he said.

The transport secretary said that according to a survey carried out by the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), 4,653 households would be affected by the project. He said the railway land required for KCR was 360 acres, PR land on KCR loop 260 acres and railway land on UP mainline 100 acres. He said there were 2,997 structures and 4,653 households (encroachers) along the KCR RoW.

When the man who wrote Pakistan's national anthem saw the divine in Hindu god Krishna

This year, Pakistan's 70th Independence anniversary and Janmashtami (the Hindu festival celebrating Krishna's birth) fell on the same day: August 14th. With that coincidence in mind, I want to share a very unique Urdu poem: Krishn Kanhaiya.

This nazm is by Hafeez Jalandhari, the Urdu poet most well-known for composing the lyrics to Pakistan's national anthem, the Qaumi Taranah. Born in the Punjabi city of Jalandhar (now in India), he moved to Lahore following India and Pakistan's independence and Partition in 1947.

As its title suggests, Krishn Kanhaiya is a poem about the Hindu god Krishna. Today, the mere idea of a Muslim poet writing about a Hindu deity raises all sorts of emotions among different groups in South Asia: surprise, joy, curiosity, suspicion, anger.

However, there is much more depth to Krishn Kanhaiya than meets the eye. This is no ordinary devotional poem. Jalandhari, ever a politically-minded thinker and writer, draws upon the mythology and persona of Krishna in order to produce a poem that is simultaneously devotional and political in nature.

It is, in fact, a call to liberate India from British colonial rule. Moreover, this poem, especially when examined in comparison with Jalandhari's more famous work, the Qaumi Taranah, can tell us a great deal about the cultural politics of South Asia in the 20th century and today.

What does it mean that the same person wrote both Krishn Kanhaiya and the national anthem of Pakistan works which have such radically different cultural rootings?

In the end, we are left with more questions than answers. Part of this is due to gaps in the historical record. Frustratingly, we don't know when Krishn Kanhaiya was written, or in what written work it was published. Did Jalandhari write it before he became involved with the Pakistan movement and was exposed to the Two-Nation Theory? Did he write the poem after migrating from India to Pakistan? Without knowing these details, I admit that it is hard to make an argument about cultural politics using this poem.

Pakistan, India conclude water talks in Washington

Pakistan and India concluded the much-delayed water talks in the US capital on Tuesday, raising hopes that they would avoid further tensions over an issue that has far-reaching consequences for both.

Secretary Water and Power Yousaf Naseem Khokhar led the Pakistani delegation, which included technical experts from his ministry.

Ambassador Aizaz Ahmed Chaudhary also attended the two-day talks held at the World Bank headquarters in Washington.

Secretary Ministry of Water

Resources Dr Amarjit Singh headed the Indian delegation, which also included representatives of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs.

The Washington meeting was part of the World Bank's efforts to resolve a dispute over Kis-hanganga and Ratle hydroelectricity projects that India is building in the occupied Kashmir. Pakistan opposes the two projects, saying that the plans violate the 1960 Indus Water Treaty that distributes waters of the river Indus and its tributaries between India and Pakistan. The negotiations are part of World Bank's efforts to resolve a dispute between the two countries over India's hydroelectricity projects in Kashmir

The two countries last held talks over the two projects in March this year during the meeting of Permanent Indus Commission in Pakistan.

The last round of the World Bank-supervised talks was held in November 2016, and the World Bank intended to hold another round in April this year but could not do so, as India refused to accept its arbitration.
